

I'm not a robot

I've done the math

I've updated the song review, and here are my thoughts: The promise that was made has been broken, but not intentionally. It's a reminder of how easily things can slip away when we're apart. The longing for someone you care about is like an aurora in the sky - breathtakingly beautiful but also elusive. It hurts to be with someone who doesn't feel the same way, it's even worse to be nothing to them at all. Sixteen long days without a call, and the urge to smoke is just one of many temptations that lead to losing control. Despite knowing there's no solution, we can't help but hold on to what could've been. But sometimes, seeing someone who looks like the one you love can be too much to handle. It's a painful reminder of what could never be. The promise was made, and now it's broken - but in a way that's hard to let go of. (Rewritten with occasional spelling errors) It's like I'm stuck in a never-ending cycle of longing for someone who's clearly out of reach. Every time I see someone who resembles them, it feels like a punch to the gut. I made a promise to myself to move on, but somehow, I always seem to find my way back to you. I've tried resisting the temptation, but it's like trying to hold water in my hands - no matter how hard I try, I end up losing control. The pain of being attached to someone who's not mine is overwhelming, and the thought of being nothing with them is even more unbearable. I know deep down that we'll never last, but I just can't seem to let go. Every time I think about it, I feel like I've broken my promise all over again. I should be stronger, but seeing a boy who looks just like you on Melrose Avenue was the final straw - it's like I'm being pulled back in against my will. Promise by Laufey Lyrics Laufey sings about a promise made to distance herself from an ex. She reflects on their past and how she failed to break free. The lyrics explore the pain of holding onto memories and the struggle with self-control. The song begins by describing a metaphorical journey 'through aurora skies,' symbolizing a fresh start, yet foreshadows an incomplete severance due to lack of closure. In romantic relationships, Verse 3 shows a turning point where the narrator gives in to their desire, showcasing the power of past bonds over logical choices. Meeting someone who resembles an old lover brings back strong memories and emotions that cannot be ignored. The repeated chorus underscores how deeply ingrained this emotional cycle is, suggesting that both the ache of love and the emptiness of being alone are long-lasting aspects of the narrator's life.
