QR codes may not be as prolific as they once were, but they're still highly useful for quickly sharing information. The thing is, it's not always clear how to scan one. If you're an Android user, here's the skinny. The Easiest Way: Use Google Lens in the Assistant You may not realize this, but if your phone has Google Assistant, you have a fast, easy, and native way to scan QR codes baked right into your handset. First, long-press the home button to bring up Assistant. Depending on which version of Assistant you have, you might have the Lens button right there as soon as Assistant pops up. Most likely, however, you need to tap on it to stop it from listening for a voice command. Just tap on the colored dots. Once it stops listening, new options become available: Lens to the left of the mic, keyboard to the right. Tap on the "Lens" button. If this is the first time you've used Lens, you'll need to activate it. Just follow the prompts and then grant it camera access. On the first run, it'll give you a quick rundown of things you can do with Lens. Just swipe that away and move the QR into the camera's view. Within seconds, it will show you what the QR is—just tap on it to execute. So, in our test case, tapping the QR navigates to howtogeek.com. Easy peasy. Option Two: Use the Google Lens App Some may argue that this is actually easier than option one, and to that, I say...maybe. The only reason I consider the first option to be easier is that your phone already has it—pretty much all modern Android handsets come with Assistant, so there's no need to install another app. But if you're all about installing other apps, then here you go. First, fire up the Google Play Store and hit up the Google Lens App. Install that bad boy. Once installed, you'll need to give it permissions and whatnot (assuming you haven't already done so within Assistant). From there, just scan your QR code. Done and done. Now, whenever you need to scan a QR, fire up Lens and get it done. So fast. By Melly Parker i Chip Somodevilla/Getty Images News/Getty Images A QR code may look like blocks of black and white, but it quickly directs you to a website. The built-in camera on the iPad can be used with an app to scan QR codes and display information. Different features are available in QR code readers, depending on what app you download. Many apps available in iTunes can be downloaded to the iPad. Not all of them are optimized for the larger screen and other features of the iPad, however. Look at the requirements listed on each app to see what hardware it will run on and whether it is optimized for the iPad. Quick Scan by iHandy Inc. is a free QR code reading app that can also scan business cards. To use QuickScan, launch the app and position the code in the box on the scanning screen. When the scan is complete, other actions like storing contact information or visiting a site can be done within the app; you don't have to close it. Quick Scan has four-and-a-half stars out of five with many ratings. It's optimized for the iPhone 5, but will work on an iPad as long as you're running iOS 4.3 or later. QR Reader for iPhone by Tap Media Ltd. can scan QR Codes, barcodes and URLs; to scan, start the app and line the code up with the line on the center of the screen. The app can also create PDF files from items it scans. In addition to its scanning capabilities, QR Reader can export and share data about the items you scan. While the app itself is free, you can upgrade it and remove ads for 99 cents or add a cloud feature for 99 cents. QR Reader for iPhone is optimized for the iPhone 5 and requires iOS 5.0 or a later version of iOS. Scan by QR Code City scans a code when you position the code in the center of the scanning screen after opening the app. It displays text from a QR code, launches the site from the QR code or prompts you to use another app to display the information, depending on what the QR Code contains. Scan includes a kiosk mode that locks the scanner when you use it as a display at an event. Scan is free in the App Store and has a rating of four-and-a-half stars out of five. It requires iOS 5 or a later version of iOS to work on your iPad. Consider the price, reviews and extra features of the QR code scanner when you decide which app to download -- there are a lot to choose from in the App Store. Reviews may address whether the app works well on the iPad, when compared to the iPhone and iPod. Free apps can be tried without risk but, on the other hand, apps with a cost may include additional features. Read the app description and check out the screenshots before downloading it to your iPad. Several months ago, I went to a local TEDx event. It was an opportunity to absorb wisdom, to learn from the experiences of others and... to participate in one of the sponsors' games. The latter could win me a trip for two to an exotic destination, but for a chance to grab the prize, I had to take a quiz at the sponsor's website. There was a poster with a huge QR code on it linking to the page. Then it occurred to me that I didn't have an app to scan the code with. "Why can't smartphone cameras scan these automatically?", I asked myself. Well, it turns out that some already can. With iOS 11, Apple is bringing the ability to scan a QR code by simply pointing your iPhone's camera at one. The link it leads to does not open automatically. Instead, you get a notification saying that a QR code has been detected. Then you tap to open it or slide down to preview the content without leaving the camera app. If the code links to a web page, it will be opened in Safari, but links to apps and games will open in the App Store instead.Curiously, the iPhone is not the first phone that can automatically detect QR codes with its stock camera app. The feature has been present for some time on phones by the Chinese brand Xiaomi and it works in a similar fashion. And Meizu – another Chinese smartphone maker – has a non-automatic QR code scanning mode in its own camera app. While QR codes never became a hit in western markets, they're quite popular in China, which is why it comes as no surprise to see scanning software built into these two brands' phones out of the box.The ability to scan QR codes will come to iPhone and iPad users later this year with the release of iOS 11. Those who are feeling adventurous can try that, along with many other cool new features, by downloading the public iOS 11 beta on their compatible device. Media Platforms Design TeamSee that thing at the right there? You've probably noticed these around, mainly on advertisements. It's called a QR code, and marketers want you to use your smartphone's camera to "read" it. Here's what you should know about them... and how to make your own!QR (Quick Response) codes are a type of barcode — not unlike the vertically-lined ones on every product you buy — that provide information when read by a scanner equipped to interpret it. They were first used in the mid-90s by a Japanese car manufacturer as a way to keep track of parts, but marketers have begun using them as a fun way to encode and share additional information with consumers, beyond what they can squeeze into an advertisement. (The one shown here is Good Housekeeping's.)After downloading an app (I like QuickMark, but there are a ton of options out there), you use your smartphone's camera to capture the code. You'll then immediately be asked if you'd like to see whatever info the code indicates — it could be a prompt to go to a website URL or to send an e-mail (say, to enter a contest). Marketers are also using them to offer discounts and coupons — a reason it really pays to look for these on ads. Further, tech savvy companies are putting them on employees' business cards, so the contact info can be quickly read and imported into a recipient's cell phone's address book.To create your own, you can use a phone app (QuickMark does this), or go to a QR generator website, such as QRStuff.com or Qurify.com. Some ideas for what you might encode: your contact info, your Facebook profile page URL, or even a Google Map of your house (for a party invitation, for example). Once created, you can save the square code as an image file that you can share or paste wherever you see fit, or you can email or text it to your friends and family (phone apps can also interpret codes sent this way).Have you ever scanned a QR code? What do you think of them? And how might you use a self-created one? Please tell us in the comments below. Ever since I installed a barcode-scanning app on my phone, I see QR codes everywhere—so naturally I wanted one of my own. If you're a barcode-scanning fool, the QR code to the left links to my personal web site. Fun!A QR ("quick response") code is a square barcode that makes getting URLs, location coordinates, any text or contact information onto a phone fast. With a barcode scanner app installed, you just point your phone's camera at the code to read its contents. Here's what reading this QR code looks like on my Android phone, using an app simply called "Barcode Scanner."To find a scanner application, Google "QR Reader" and the model of your phone. (If you've got a favorite scanner app that you're using, let us know in the comments.)Encoding a regular URL is a fine use of QR codes—especially lengthy and complicated URLs on movie and event flyers—but one of my favorite uses of QR codes is swapping mobile app recommendations with your friends. Since you can't search the Android Market on the web or in desktop software, you're always stuck tapping in search terms by hand. The App Referer app generates QR codes for every one of your applications. So if you want to "give" that app to a friend, you call up the QR code, and your pal can scan your phone's screen.You'll also see QR codes on web pages, in store windows, on business cards, and on conference badges. You can generate your own QR code with the information you want others to be able to read onto their phones quickly too. This QR code generator can embed a URL, text, a phone number, or an address and ready-to-send SMS message into a QR code.If you Google "QR code generator" you'll find others, but beware of generators that force a redirect through their site when someone scans the resulting code and gets a URL. (For example, this generator has options to encode Google Maps coordinates, social network information, and Vcards and can print t-shirts and stickers from the codes it generates, but if you enter a simple web site URL it creates a redirect through the qrstuff.com site.)Speaking of stickers, now I just need to print a few with my code to stick on my laptop, phone, and conference badges.Smarterware is Lifehacker editor emeritus Gina Trapani's new home away from 'hacker.
