iconic singer Sidhu Moosewala's death has left a huge vacuum in the music industry and also in the hearts of his fans. Although the legend has left us for his heavenly abode, his legacy still lives on. The reason we are saying this is because the internet has brought forth a video of a dance group paying tribute to the late singer. The video shows a group of people doing bhangra to Sidhu Moosewala's famous track Levels, and it is making a lot of buzz on the internet. The impeccable synchronisation and perfect rhythmic steps to the euphoric track are just mesmerising to watch. The viral video was posted along with the caption that read, "Sade Level De Ni Haan Diye! A small clip from our Sidhu Moosewala tribute this past weekend." The now-viral video opens with around fifteen people standing in a V formation. They began their performance with hand tutting and then kept us all intrigued till the end by switching to bhangra and giddha. Posted by an Instagram page called Bhangra Empire, the video shows the dancers clad in the traditional Punjabi outfits and dancing to Levels. The dancers can be seen performing at the forefront of a big screen that reads "Dil Da Ni Mada," which is another hit by Siddhu Moose Wala. The amazingly synchronised performance is too good to miss out on the internet today. The comments section was flooded with red heart and fire emoticons. While praising the impressive combination of bhangra and tutting, one user commented, "Tutting with bhangra, wow!" and ended with a red heart emoticon. Another wrote, "Great tribute with awesome performance." A third user wrote, "Bomb, what a tribute man," and ended with a handful of fire emoticons. So far the video has garnered more than two lakh likes and has been played over 2.5 million times. Omala is a self-taught Bhangra dancer. There is no denying the fact that Bhangra is infectious. Its energy and charm are hard to resist and no one is immune to it. The euphoric folk dance form has caught the fancy of a woman in the US state of Alabama. Omala is a "self-taught Bhangra dancer", that's what her Instagram bio says. While Omala's Instagram has several videos of her stunning performances, recently she posted a clip of herself performing on the hit number Sanu Ta Bulaano Vi Geya by Nimrat Khaira. Well, it is not only her perfectly rhythmic bhangra steps, which has etched its presence in everyone's heart but also her on-point expressions. It is truly mind-boggling to see that despite Punjabi not being her mother tongue, Omala knows the entire lyrics of every song that she performs. To give viewers a proper traditional feel, she wore a salwar suit with dupatta. Several Indians, especially Punjabis, took to the comments section and praised her dedication to learning a new language, while many said that her lip sync was way better than theirs. One user wrote, "Omg lip sync timing is so much better than me." Another said, "Amazing, this is the best thing on the internet today. Lots of love from Punjab." A third user wrote, "Hell yes, you had the swag and attitude and perfectly done steps to traditional Bhangra! Whooot whooot." Many said that she dances better than even some Punjabis.
