Published: 19:30 GMT, September 08, 2022 | Updated: 04:34 GMT, September 9, 2022 Former President Donald Trump paid tribute to Queen Elizabeth II on Thursday, minutes after Buckingham Palace announced her death at the age of 96. "Melania and I are deeply saddened to learn of her loss. Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II," he said on his media platform TruthSocial. The historic and remarkable reign of Queen Elizabeth left Great Britain a legacy of peace and prosperity." Trump has met the Queen twice in his capacity as President, first over tea at Windsor Castle in 2018 and then during a full state visit the following year." God bless the queen, may she reign in our hearts forever," he concluded. President Donald Trump and First Lady Melania hosted a full state visit from Queen Elizabeth II in 2019. This was Trump's second visit to the UK as president. President Donald Trump with Queen Elizabeth II After Trump praised her as a "great, great woman" at a state banquet at Buckingham Palace in 2019, Trump took to his Truth Social platform Thursday afternoon to pay tribute to Trump's visits to the UK. The British legislators denied him the opportunity to address Parliament on his first visit, and the trip was cut short. Among the visits were critics who claimed he broke protocol by walking in front of the queen as they inspected the guard of honor on his first visit.he was even scolded for clinking glasses at a state banquet on his second trip. But for all his anti-establishment rhetoric and protocol-breaking behavior, Trump also coveted the approval of secular figures like the Queen. His first visit caused controversy when he saw an honor guard with the queen and managed to overtake her, prompting her to carefully pull him aside. He also made it clear that the two visits to the UK were among the highlights of his presidency. After their first meeting, when he inspected the guards and had tea with the monarch, he said that they got along very well. Let's go upstairs and have some tea. And I didn't know that - it was supposed to take 15 minutes, but it took about an hour," he said. Because we understood each other. And she liked our first lady, and she liked our first lady. But we got on fantastically. But time went on - you know, sometimes you get along, and time goes on. Lara Trump, Eric Trump's wife, also paid tribute to the Queen on Instagram. Lara Trump, Eric Trump's wife, also paid tribute to the Queen on Instagram. "Never in my wildest dreams did I expect to be at Buckingham Palace and in the company of Queen Elizabeth II. "It was truly an experience that I will never forget for the rest of my life. To be next to a woman who devoted herself to serving her country for 70 years, never crossed a line, was always the support that her country and people needed, was inexpressibly humiliating. "Sincere condolences to all the people of Great Britain on the death of an unparalleled monarch, leader, mother, grandmother and great-grandmother."
